Located in a former perfume factory, the hotel's chic suites are set around a leafy courtyard.

Location

The hotel is tucked away on a small residential side street off Via Tortona, Milan's design and fashion district, just a short walk from Porta Genova railway station. This is the heart of Milan's Navigli District, home to the city's historic canals lined with restaurants and bars.

Style/character

The hotel tastefully blends environmental sustainability and modern technology. Wood, glass and steel are elegantly combined to form a state-of-the-art building constructed around a lush garden that is home to flowering jasmine, maple trees and roses. The hotel's library houses books published between the 18th and 20th centuries acquired over the years from antique bookshops and private collections from across Europe.

Service

Run by a dynamic young team, the service is friendly and professional. Staff have plenty of recommendations in the local area, from bars to restaurants.

Rooms

Distributed across three floors, the suites are named after flowering trees and plants while others are inspired by fruit trees, including fig and cherry, that produce aromatic essential oils, recalling the site's days as a perfume factory. Rooms are decorated in subtle colours and feature Italian textiles and furnishings as well as locally-made leather sofas and chairs. Each suite has an inviting living area with brushed oak wood floors, a 48" television set and a spacious bathroom.
